Medical Assisting at Leeward CC

Industry certification that’s affordable and accessible. Start your healthcare career today.

Some people know what kind of work they want to do from a very young age while others need experiences to guide them. Different circumstances influence these decisions, but for three of our Medical Assisting students the end goal is the same— they all want a job where they can help people.

OCEWD’s new Medical Assisting (MA) Program provided Cindy Mendoza, Shania Kim Kahana, and Chelsea Billaber with an opportunity to pursue this goal. This unique, 12-month class, with stackable credentials in multiple industry certifications, was designed to help those with no healthcare experience and those who are currently employed. By completing their training, these three young women will be prepared to meet Hawaii’s demand for skilled Medical Assistants, and do what they love for a living.

Through funding from a grant, the inaugural cohort had 50% of their tuition covered, which included the cost of scrubs, books, supplies, and exam fees. The balance had to be paid for by the students, which was difficult for Cindy Mendoza. She always wanted to work in patient care but balancing work and school, with limited finances, wasn’t easy.

“The hardest thing was quitting one of my jobs because I lost my benefits and seniority... but it was worth it to take this program, “ - Cindy Mendoza

She worked at an assisted living facility straight out of high school. Then, she pursued a nursing degree at Kapiolani CC, but couldn’t afford to continue. After putting aside her education to work full-time between Straub and Kaiser Moanalua, Cindy found OCEWD’s program online and made the commitment to get certified as a Medical Assistant.

After just 6 months in the program she already has her CHAA (Certified Healthcare Access Associate) certification, and she is using what she learned at work. Always looking for growth in a job, she welcomes change, and hopes that getting additional certifications will open doors to new work experiences.

Like Cindy, Shania Kim Kahana loves helping others and wants to work in patient care. Because her brother was in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) her ultimate goal is to work in an NICU. She chose to work right out of high school, as a lei greeter, but taking care of her grandmother set her on a path to find work at Wilson Senior Living in Kailua, and take the Medical Assisting program. Without any formal healthcare training, she saw the program as a way to help get her foot in the door at a hospital or clinic.
Thanks to a supportive family, she was able to make time for classes even while raising a 5-year old son. She also qualified for financial assistance through the First-to-Work program (assistance for single parents). Now she, and four of her co-workers at Wilson, are motivated and enjoying the class, “we’re all like family in there now… it gets exciting when you start taking the steps (to reach your goal),” she said. After completing her MA class she plans to transfer to UH West Oahu or Kapiolani CC to pursue a nursing degree.

One benefit of the MA program is accessibility. For someone like Chelsea Billaber, who isn’t exactly sure what kind of work to pursue, this gives her a chance to try things out as an MA without a huge time or financial commitment (compared to a degree program). She has always worked in retail, recently at Target and at CVS Health/Longs Drugs, to support her two young children. Working at Longs Drugs got her interested in a position as a Pharmacy Technician, but she isn’t totally committed to that path. No longer satisfied with retail jobs, she searched for a job in the medical field and that’s when she found OCEWD’s Medical Assisting program.

Chelsea was able to get tuition assistance through HINET (Hawaii Nutrition Employment and Training program), but she also had to quit her job at Target to accommodate her class schedule. It was a big leap for her to give up good pay and benefits, but she says, “It feels good because (taking the class) is something I wouldn’t think I could do. This is going to set me up for something better– something I feel I needed.” She’s still not certain if she wants to become a nurse but she is determined to start as a Medical Assistant and see if can lead to a career where she helps others.

“I like the teachers, the instruction, even though it’s fast-paced, we’re getting everything” - Chelsea Billaber

There are other students in this inaugural cohort, like Cindy, Shania, and Chelsea, who have overcome personal, professional, and financial challenges. They are all very determined and, as they progress through their training, and receive their certifications, they are already realizing the benefits of a course designed to maximize their knowledge and employability.

With industry professionals instructing, small class sizes, and Leeward CC’s support services, the Medical Assisting Program is designed for student success. Don’t wait - start today - and build the foundation for a lasting, sustainable career by registering for the next Medical Assisting cohort.

Visit ocewd.org/MedicalAssisting, or call 455-0477 for registration and information.
